Dear Friends of NCADV

Thank you for your support and belief in our work and our ongoing commitment to the creation of a culture that has zero tolerance for domestic violence. In this time of changes impacting our nation, our dedication to catalyzing change and ensuring a voice for survivors and victims remains unwavering.

In this transition report you will find that we have met many challenges head-on, remaining a home for advocates and never diverting from our mission of providing a voice for victims and survivors of domestic violence. You’ll see …

- How our advocacy webinars informed advocates on issues like serving immigrant survivors of domestic violence, strangulation, and giving expert testimony on domestic violence.
- That our Cosmetic Reconstructive Support is steadily connecting victims of intimate partner assault with doctors who can provide them with cosmetic support.
- How many survivors received the financial education resources and tools they needed to rebuild financially after leaving an abusive partner.
- And so much more!

I hope you will find this report informative and encouraging. While we understand the challenges of this time in our nation, we also know that we - all of us together - are effecting change. Your ongoing support of NCADV, in all of the ways in which you do, is helping to make that change. Remember, use your voice, your wallet, your heart - you can and do make things happen.

Sincerely,

Ruth M. Glenn
